

LESSON G2

Write the simple subject in the blank to the right.

Montana Jack's horse was faster than lightning.	horse
1. My own chubby horse raced like a snail, only with fur.	horse
2. I thought about the story The Tortoise and the Hare .	I
3. Everybody loves an unexpected victory from an underdog.	Everybody
4. Even slow, plodding Penelope could have an hour of glory.	Penelope
5. Clouds of dust whirled up in front of us as we tried to keep up.	Clouds
6. How did defeat surprise me after all?	defeat

Identify the complete subject.

Henry's prize rifle lay in the grass.	Henry's prize rifle
1. Next to it rested the keys to his front door.	the keys to his front door
2. Henry's heart skipped a beat, well, several.	Henry's heart
3. Racing up the front steps, a frantic, frightened Henry turned the door knob.	a frantic, frightened Henry
4. Nine bullet holes formed a perfectly executed 'X' in the wood.	Nine bullet holes
5. Henry's mysterious enemy was a straight shot.	Henry's mysterious enemy
6. Stepping back from the doorway, Henry's T-shirt clung to him, drenched with sweat.	Henry's T-shirt

GRADING

This lesson is worth 48 points total for 6 correct answers in each of sections 1–7 and 6 complex sentences in section 8.

Write the simple predicate in the blank.

Jenna rode into the sunset. rode

1. The proud heads of the ostriches cast long shadows beneath her chariot wheels. cast

2. The day spent itself in a lavish display of color. spent

3. Jenna's feelings of hope plummeted with the dark that swiftly followed. plummeted

4. Yes, ostriches ran like the wind. ran

5. But not even the wind could outrun the vengeance of the king. could outrun

6. She closed her eyes briefly. closed

Identify the complete predicate.

The hurricane swept away every house. swept away every house

1. Cranberry Avenue was now strictly a heap of debris.

was now strictly a heap of debris

2. She still counted off the house numbers to herself.

still counted off the house numbers to herself

3. She always paused longest in front of her vanished gate.

always paused longest in front of her vanished gate

4. She wished so powerfully and helplessly for the past.

wished so powerfully and helplessly for the past

5. But wishes gave her nothing but further pain.

gave her nothing but further pain

6. She vowed to herself again and again to rebuild.

vowed to herself again and again to rebuild

Identify each sentence as either a simple sentence or a compound sentence by circling S or C.

- | | | |
|---|-----|-----|
| 1. I have a tendency to oversleep. | (S) | C |
| 2. It causes me no end of problems, but I can't seem to shake the habit. | S | (C) |
| 3. Why does everybody but me wake up when an alarm clock goes off? | (S) | C |
| 4. I turn the volume up as high as it will go, and I still don't hear it. | S | (C) |
| 5. I am thinking of rigging up a bucket of water above my pillow. | (S) | C |
| 6. I wish my alarm clock could pull on the rope and douse me with water. | (S) | C |

Circle the independent clause in each sentence below. Remember that an independent clause can stand on its own. An independent clause can function as a simple sentence.

1. While Amina slept, Greg noiselessly snuck her teddybear from beneath her arm.
2. Amina's forehead creased in sleep.
3. Would she wake up?
4. He let out a long, slow breath, watching as her features relaxed.
5. If the surprise was going to work, he needed to act fast.
6. Quickly, Greg dressed the bear in the pirate costume.

Circle the dependent clause or clauses (there may be more than one or none at all) in each sentence below. Unlike an independent clause, a dependent clause cannot stand on its own.

1. Although Monique sat quietly at her desk, her thoughts were far away.
2. Until the professor mentioned living for a time in Ghana, she had been paying close attention.
3. Since it took so much daily effort to put Ghana behind her, it shook her up to hear her home mentioned without any warning on an ordinary Thursday.
4. Suddenly her inner being was no longer in Montana. None!
5. She imagined she was winding through the labyrinth of stalls in her village market, because Thursdays were market days, after all.
6. She could almost taste a paper-wrapped hot beignet right now, even though she was stuck in Montana.

Turn the simple sentences below into complex sentences by adding one or more dependent clauses to the independent clause of the sentence. There are many correct ways to do this, so be creative!

Example: Merlin lived his life backwards.

According to some legends I've read, Merlin lived his life backwards.

or

Merlin lived his life backwards, even though he seemed like an ordinary man.

1. The wolf pack slunk away.

Even as I fainted, the wolf pack slunk away.

2. She ate as much and as fast as she could.

When she finally reached the shelter of her hut, she ate as much and as fast as she could.

3. Jack was even afraid of rubber ducks.

Not only was he afraid of the ducks in the pond, Jack was even afraid of rubber ducks.

4. The grieving woman kept to her room.

Because she was afraid to be reproached for crying so much, the grieving woman kept to her room.

5. Nothing could deter him from reaching his goal.

Even though people might say cruel things, nothing could deter him from reaching his goal.

6. She secretly believed her Lego people could come to life.

Ever since she had read The Little Princess, she secretly believed her Lego people could come to life.